

Robert J. Demarest is the director emeritus of the Center for Biocommunications at the College of Physicians & Surgeons, Columbia University, New York, New York. Mr. Demarest is renowned for his work as a medical illustrator—his work has appeared in dozens of medical textbooks, countless research papers, medical journals, and many popular magazines, such as the Reader's Digest, Life, Newsweek, and Time Magazine—and although he has received many awards for his work, he is most proud of being the honored recipient of the Crosby Medal for Excellence awarded by Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

He is the author and co-author of several medical texts, and most recently, the author of Traveling with Winslow Homer. Mr. Demarest has presented numerous lectures of the life of Winslow Homer at museums, art societies, and angling clubs.

Meet Mr. Demarest and listen to his fascinating experience of creating Traveling with Winslow Homer on Tuesday, October 28th, 2014 at the Sleepy Hollow High School auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Demarest is the guest speaker at the National Honor Society induction ceremony that evening.
